Commemorative Medals

An impressive group of British and Foreign Exhibition Award Medals to the firm of Anderson, Abbott & Anderson

Anderson, Abbott & Anderson were established in 1867 in London, with works in Harpenden, Herts and Dod Street, Limehouse, East London. Originally specializing in agricultural products they moved towards products for the fishing industry and later all manner of vulcanized rubber and waterproof products, from coats, legging and hats to 'horse loin cloths'. In 1874 they were at 37 Queen Victoria Street. They later dropped the name Abbott and became Anderson, Anderson & Anderson Ltd., of 157-158, Piccadilly.

Lewis worked for Liberty amongst many other companies and with C. F. A. Voysey and Walter Crane. In the 1870s he helped to decorate Alfred Waterhouse's Eaton Hall and also designed the stand for Howell, James & Co. at the 1878 Paris Exhibition. His work on this medal seems to have become forgotten.

Caleb Petch (1853-1921) to design an exhibition hall that could accommodate 5000 people. It was built on Foreshore specifically to hold a major sea fisheries exhibition covering every imaginable aspect of fishing. Other Properties

- 273 Charles II, The Restoration, 1660, a 'squeeze' on a copper sheet of the obverse of the "FELICITAS BRITANNIÆ" medal, by John Roettier, bust of the King r., hair long over shoulders, in scaled armour with mantle around, CAROLVS. SECVNDVS. D.G. MAG. BRIT. FRAN. ET. HIB. REX., approx. 104 x 92mm., medal image 83mm. (cf. MI 460/53; Eimer 212; vL II, 464; BDM V, 164), nearly extremely fine £500-800

The date of manufacture is uncertain but the cataloguers believe it to be, if not contemporary, then perhaps early 18th century and quite close to the reign of Charles II. Helen Farquhar writes [Portraiture of our Stuart Monarchs, BNJ, 1908] of the "many restrikes" of the medal, but the impression shows little signs of the die flaws that become evident in some examples of the medal. The dies were not amongst those sold by the widow of Norbert Roettier in 1727 (subsequently acquired by the dealer Matthew Young in 1828 and now in the British Museum), but she notes that they were sold close to the time of the publication of her article and that they were "no longer in a condition for further use". The medal is unsigned and it has been attributed to both Philip and Joseph Roettier. Farquhar follows Hawkins [MI] in strongly believing the medal to be the work of John Roettier.

- 622 † South Africa, Z.A.R., President Paul Kruger, an original steel die for the reverse of the single-shaft or “Disselboom” five shillings, 1892, showing the arms of Transvaal: a circular shield of arms over flags, eagle above, total height 36mm., maximum diameter at base, 55mm. (cf. Dav 60; KM 8.1; NC, The Coinage of South Africa, 1900; BDM V, 408-09), contained in a contemporary plain tin box, the striking surface officially cancelled with a series of deep and damaging punch-marks, nonetheless an amazing relic of an iconic coinage £1000-1500

The initial coinage of 1892 was all struck at the Royal Prussian Mint, in Berlin, from dies cut by the Chief Engraver Otto Schultz (b. 1848), though it was not till the coins arrived in South Africa that the error of the “double-shaft” was spotted. This was further aggravated by the engraver’s signature OS below the bust of Kruger - Os being the Dutch for “ox” - and Kruger, who was about to stand for re-election, was not at all happy. New dies were speedily cut and dispatched to the recently established Mint at Pretoria and it was there that this die would have been used. Whilst the mintage figures for the 1892 single-shaft crown are given as 14,000, it is not known how many pairs of dies were used to complete this output. The tin storage box would seem to be the original in which the die has always been housed.
